

Addressing an urgent need

The 10 ancestral languages of the Doyon region, including nine Athabascan languages plus Iñupiaq, represent half of the 20 Native languages in the state of Alaska.

Due to the rapidly decreasing health of creative and fluent Native language speakers, the Native languages within the Doyon region are not being passed on quickly enough to ensure their survival. All of the Doyon region languages are severely to critically endangered, and will be lost within the span of a few generations if no action is taken. There is an urgent need to promote and foster language opportunities for non-speakers.

To respond to this need, Doyon Foundation began laying the groundwork for a region-wide language revitalization program in 2009. In 2012, Doyon, Limited generously awarded start-up funding to establish the program. The program has continued to grow since then.

Language Revitalization Program

Working together to revitalize our languages

Providing the opportunity to learn

We believe that every Doyon shareholder and descendant should have the opportunity to learn their language and culture. With that in mind, our immediate program goals are to:

- Expand the organizational capacity of Doyon Foundation to effectively and efficiently develop, implement and sustain a Native language revitalization program.
- Develop a language revitalization program that will ensure the cultures and languages of the Doyon region are taught, documented and easily accessible.

This program is not intended to replace any other current efforts, but rather to collaborate and partner with like-minded organizations, and align efforts, goals and resources.

our Language Grants

As part of the effort to revitalize the endangered Native languages of the Doyon region, we award Our Language grants of up to $5,000 each year. Doyon region tribal governments/tribal councils/communities; nonprofit Alaska Native organizations, societies and community groups; and Alaska Native cultural, educational and recreational organizations/centers are eligible to apply. Watch our website for details on the next application period.

DOYON languages online

The Doyon Languages Online project is a partnership with 7000 Languages, a nonprofit that supports endangered language learning partially through software donated by Transparent Language. In 2016, we received a three-year, $900,000 grant from the Administration for Native Americans to help fund the project. In fall 2017, we received a three-year, $977,423 grant from the U.S. Department of Education – Alaska Native Educational Program to expand the project efforts.

With these two grants, we are producing online learning opportunities for nine of the 10 Indigenous languages of the Doyon region. The first set of online courses were made available in summer 2019, and are now available for free to all interested learners at doyonfoundation.com/dlo.

PROJECT GOALS

Increase the number of people who speak Benhti Kokhut'ana Kenaga' (Lower Tanana), Deg Xinag, Denaakk'e (Koyukon), Dithaad X't'een l'in Aandëg' (Tanacross), Dinak'i (Upper Kuskokwim), Dinjii Zhuh K'yaa (Gwich'in), Hän, Holikachuk, and Nee'aaneeg'n' (Upper Tanana) by:

- Creating introductory online language-learning lessons for each of the languages
- Training teachers in the use of the technology through partnerships with school districts, and field testing lessons with students
- Creating a template document that helps other language communities in the Doyon area to complete similar online language lesson projects

DEVELOPMENT TEAM

The Doyon Languages Online project is blessed with a diverse group of experts that make up our development team:

- Elders from the language community
- Educators with 10+ years of experience
- Linguists that specialize in Athabascan languages
- Doyon Foundation staff
- Software partners at Transparent Online and 7000 Languages
